AMERICAN
JAZZ MUSEUM

Negro Leagues Baseball & American Jazz Museums

Sunday, July 21, 12:45 PM – 3:15 PM

Both gems share a large building in KC's 18th and Vine Historic Jazz District. Black baseball players were forced out of white teams by around 1900. African Americans then formed their traveling teams taking on any opponent. In 1920 these teams created their league – the Negro National League. One of the prime teams was the Kansas City Monarchs, featuring stars such as Jackie Robinson, Ernie Banks, Satchell Paige, and KC's own Buck O'Neil over the long history of Negro Leagues baseball. If you are fortunate, you will get to visit with Bob Kendrick, the museum's engaging and passionate President.

<https://www.nlbm.com/>

Kansas City has a rich history in American jazz, second only to New Orleans. Charlie "Yardbird" Parker is simply one example of a local jazz musician. The museum exists to celebrate and promote the experience of jazz as an original American art form through performance, exhibition, education, and research at one of the country's jazz crossroads.
